Paris, France

A little time by the Seine

Two days of looking up, slowing down, and keeping the small things.

We stopped beside the Seine to look at the Eiffel Tower. I had seen it in pictures, but wanted a photo of this moment.

My favorite part was having no hurry to leave the river.

We followed the Seine to Pont Alexandre III and stopped for this view of the bridge. Looking at the details became part of our walk.

Later we went up to Montmartre and stood outside Sacre-Coeur. I took this photograph to remember the building against the sky.

We went inside the Louvre Pyramid. We took a photo looking through the glass.

Let us use the river photo for the cover and keep the Louvre photo in the second chapter.

After the Louvre we walked through the Tuileries Garden. We found a place to pause and kept this photograph of the garden.

We ended our walk outside Notre-Dame. This older licensed illustration stands in for the facade in our fictional travel journal; it is not a photograph taken on our sample travel date.
